Some Helpful Pointers

Composition: A well composed photo should be pleasing to the viewer’s eye; it should draw the viewer to a focal point of the photo and not be overly cluttered. Remember your ‘rule of thirds.’

Print Quality: While it is possible to print decent quality photos on a home printer, sometimes home prints just aren’t up to par. Take pride in your work and show us the best quality print you can muster.

Creativity: That first impression, ‘WOW!’ factor, is important. Show us something no one has ever seen before. A new perspective on an old object, or a detail that someone else may have missed.
